REJECT ARSON INDICTMENTS

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TODAY'S action by the special Hempstead county grand jury investigating the alleged Hope arson cases is final. It may not seem so to those who are fond of scurrilous gossip—but so long as we believe in justice under the law we must be prepared to accept the judgment of 16 men debating in the secret grand jury room over what is and what is not evidence.

Farmers Applaud E. D., Who Pledges AAA Continuation

Keep Processing Tax, Says Wallace, While Industry Keeps Tariff

HITS AT TALMADGE

President Refers to Stout Opposition of Georgia's Governor

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Four thousand farmers, assembled here from 25 states to urge continuance of the agricultural adjustment program, cheered President Roosevelt Tuesday as he pledged his support in keeping alive "a national policy which on the whole is proving successful."

The president addressed the farmers from the south portion of the White House, being introduced by Secretary Wallace as "the heart of America." "My friends, it is a pretty good-looking crowd," the president began, as he responded with a smile and a wave to the shouted greetings of the group on the lawn.

Then, noting members of congress standing beside him, Mr. Roosevelt added, jokingly:

"I'm glad I've got quite a number of members of congress in captivity here with me today."

The president read his remarks and was interrupted by applause and shouts at almost every pause. He lashed out at the "high and mighty" with special axes to grind, who have been "deliberately trying to mislead people who know nothing of farming by misrepresenting me, why use a pocketbook work by lying about the kind of program under which this nation is operating."

Georgia Farmer Aids "It is your duty and mine," he said, "to continue to educate the people of this country to the fact that adjustment means not only adjustment downward, but adjustment upward. It is high time for us to repeat that we have not wastefully destroyed food in any form. A few leading citizens have gone astray," a farmer shouted in this interruption from the crowd: "We have one down our way, South Georgia."

"I was about to say from ignorance," the president resumed as the crowd roared.

The farmer's shout was one of several references during the day to Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, a vigorous administration critic.

Then at the close of the speech, as the president turned to leave, shouts arose from all parts of the crowd for Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt smiled broadly, raised his hand for silence and told the audience that Mrs. Roosevelt was at their Hyde Park home.

"The farmers, who earlier had heard Wallace assail the 'big boys' who passed the tariff," planned a special meeting Wednesday to discuss a permanent national farm organization to promote production control and national legislation.

A Good Omen Mr. Roosevelt told the assembly, "I am sure you have the temerity to question the motives of your march on Washington."

Omnibus Banking Bill Opposed by Chase Bank Head

Winthrop W. Aldrich Says It Would Create "Despotic" Authority

DEADLOCK ON NRA

House Stand With President, Demanding Extension for 2 Years

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National bank of New York, asserted Wednesday that the omnibus banking bill would convert the Federal Reserve System "into an instrument of despotic authority" in his appearance before the senate banking committee.

Aldrich said that three experiments in the last few years to obtain a higher price level by "manipulating credit and currency have failed" and further experimenting might bring on a vicious and perhaps uncontrollable conflagration.

NRA Deadlock Looms WASHINGTON—(AP)—A deadlock threatened Wednesday over the extension of the NRA.

Senate administration leaders insisted they would hold out for the 10 months' extension approved by the senate. But house Democratic chiefs gave no indication they would accept anything less than the 2-year extension desired by President Roosevelt.

Senate for Short NRA WASHINGTON—(AP)—In a rush of speed, the senate passed almost by unanimous consent Tuesday a resolution extending the NRA in a much contracted form for only 10 months—an action directly and openly opposed by President Roosevelt—then took up the Wagner labor relations bill.

The modified NRA bill was sent to the house where Speaker Byrnes said, "We'll take it up right away." The measure is still before the house ways and means committee, and there appeared little doubt that the group would report out a demand for a two-year extension of the Recovery Act, as requested by the president.

Obviously, the hope of the White House for a two-year extension has rested with the house, and with the possibility that some compromise could be effected between the two branches.

But as the bill was moved across to the house side of the capital late Tuesday it was accompanied by blunt warning from senate leaders that any alterations in their proposal would meet with opposition, and possibly delay all action until after the present law expires June 16.

Meanwhile, a mile down Pennsylvania avenue, assembled NRA employees were being told by Donald B. Rieberg, chairman of the organization, that in his opinion they need not worry about continuation of the organization.

In a speech to the staff, he criticized the theory of a short term extension, and stressed what he called the "inevitability" that government from now on must always maintain the legislative functions which NRA now administers.

While there were reports that his speech was to relieve the "fitters" that some employees may have about the future of their jobs, personnel officers were willing to supply records that there was little or no extra turnover as a result of uncertainty.

TVA Bill Amended WASHINGTON—(AP)—By a vote of 56 to 19, the senate Tuesday passed the Norris bill intended by its author to buttress the Tennessee Valley Authority against further federal court injunctions. The bill now goes to the house where delay was in prospect in the form of additional hearings before the Military committee.

The bill, offered by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, father of the Tennessee valley industrialization experiment, carried a score of amendments to the TVA law designed to make certain this federal agency had the right to help municipalities acquire private power systems and to dispose of surplus power at Tennessee river dams.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The question of whether congressmen steal typewriters bobbed up in house debate Tuesday with Representative Robert Rich, Republican, Pennsylvania, demanding that the thieves be apprehended. Hearings on the legislative appropriation bill disclosed Monday that South Trimble, clerk of the house, complained about members sending him machines back home.

"Mr. Speaker," said Rich, turning again to Speaker Joe Byrnes, Democrat, Tennessee, "the public doesn't know who these thieves are. They might think it's you or me. Trimble should give us a list of the men who have stolen these typewriters."

Representative Louis Ludlow, Democrat, Indiana, claimed that Trimble had not accused congressmen of thievery, but with only unfamiliarity with the law against taking the typewriters out of the capitol and congressional office buildings.

Later, Representative Matthew A. Dwyer, Democrat, Pennsylvania, complained that he could not longer get flowers from the botanical garden for his office. He was told that a law was enacted last session against the practice.

First Sight of Grass for 'Iceberg' and It Certainly Hits Bull's Eye

It's enough to make a bull's eye pop out when he sees grass for the first time in his 17 months of life. That's what Iceberg is seeing in this picture and it's no nature fake. Iceberg, a Guernsey, was born in Antarctica, a member of the Byrd expedition, and here he is getting acquainted with grass on the Department of Agriculture lawn in Washington, as Byrd, left, showed him to Secretary Henry A. Wallace.

Change Reported in Mail for Okay

Rumored That Route Will Be Changed From Hope to Washington

Although neither the Washington nor the Hope postoffices have received any verification of his appointment, the future of the post office in Hope, living in New Hope, in Pike county, says that he has received the appointment to carry mail from Washington to Okay for the four year period beginning July 1.

This is the same route that Tom Haynes is now carrying. The route will be changed to leave from the Washington post office instead of the Hope office beginning on July 1, the post office department announces. The carrier will be required to service boxes between Washington and Columbus and carry Okay mail en route to that town.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—The squeamishness of New Dealers as to unauthorized news ought not to be overlooked by those correspondents who used to remark upon Mr. Hoover's peevishness when things he didn't like appeared in the newspapers.

There is still great contrast with the Coolidge administration, in which officials took their cue from their president, who simply refused to read unfavorable articles about himself. Various types of censorship exist in the many federal bureaus and agencies. None of them works. And sometimes when they fail to work in a conspicuous manner, a stray paragraph of (Continued on page four)

Bobcats Set for Friday Night Tilt

Will Meet All-Star Team in Benefit Game at 8 o'Clock

Next year's football team was pronounced ready Wednesday to clash with an all-star aggregation led by Pete Brown at the high school stadium Friday night.

The game, starting at 8 p. m. will climax two weeks of spring football practice. Admission will be 10 and 25 cents, proceeds to be used to repair equipment for the 1935 team.

Couch Foy Hammons said that he would send two backfield combinations against his former grid stars.

The first backfield is composed of Brewster at quarter with L. Spears, Stone and Cargile as the other backs. The second backfield will be Bright at quarter with Stroud, R. Turner and Ponder.

The balance of the team will be Holly and Seacrest at center, Morris, Anderson, Perdue, Galloway and Beneker at tackles, D. Porson, Keith, W. Parker and K. B. Spears at guard, with Reece and Ramsey at end positions.

Coach Hammons, after looking over his prospects for the past two weeks, expressed satisfaction with his team. "They look good. I believe we will have a better team than last year, with more weight, power and punch," the coach said.

Pete Brown, star Bobcat quarterback for four years, announced his lineup Wednesday afternoon as:

Ends—K. Connelly and Mauldin. Tackles—S. Jones and Hobbs. Guards—Richards, England and Owens. Center—H. Chamberlain. Backfield—Brown at quarter, Payne and Harner halfbacks and Bill Wray at fullback.

McFaddin Speaks to Mississippi Rotary

TUPELO, Miss.—(AP)—Jim Walker, of Memphis, Monday was elected governor of the 18th Rotary district which includes portions of Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas at the annual convention here. He takes office July 1.

E. F. McFaddin, of Hope, Ark., representative of Rotary International, delivered an address before the convention on "Club Service and the New Deal," but the speaker stressed principally "Club Service" as he said the "new deal" belonged to "political conventions."

"Club service," he said, "is the cornerstone of Rotary" and "Rotary is an organization that does not attempt to enter into politics."

Death Penalty for Robbery With Firearms in Oklahoma

IS CRITICALLY HURT

Physicians Believe Day May Die of Infection in Wound

IDABEL, Okla.—(AP)—Sam Day and Ruben McKean, escaped Arkansas convicts, may forfeit their lives for the bank robbery which ended in their capture after a gun-fight here Tuesday.

Assistant County Attorney Bascom Coker announced Wednesday that McCurtain county would try the convicts for robbery with firearms—a capital offense in Oklahoma.

Infection set up Wednesday in the wound received by Day, physicians said, adding that they believed he might not live.

Filing of charges against the wounded robber was delayed pending his recovery.

McKean was bound over to the district court on a charge of robbery with firearms.

Demand Removal Governor Curley

Blame Loss of U. S. Work Funds on Massachusetts Executive

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—Two foes of public utilities demanded Wednesday the removal from office of Governor James M. Curley by armed forces of the United States and the vacating of that office on constitutional grounds.

Frank H. Sullivan, of Waban, who fought the utilities in several state cases, in asking President Roosevelt to remove Curley, attributed the continued failure of Massachusetts to receive 600 million dollars in federal funds to Curley's not being properly sworn into office.

Parks Pledges Aid on Water Plant

Congressman Writes Washington Mayor and Town Council

Congressman Tillman B. Parks of the 7th Congressional District wrote the mayor and town council last week in reference to a telegram which they had previously sent him relative to the waterworks project which the town has applied for through the Public Works Administration, as follows:

Mayor and Council, Washington, Arkansas: Gentlemen:

"Your telegram asking about a waterworks application for your town before the PWA has been received. I immediately called at the Public Works Administration and found this application had just been sent to Washington by your state PWA office. I will do everything possible to secure an early consideration of this."

Yours very truly, Tillman B. Parks.

The preliminary application for this project was filed along with others by the town council about two months ago. Nothing further was heard from the application, which prompted the council to seek the assistance of Congressman Parks in obtaining the waterworks system.

Filipinos to Take Over the Islands U. S. Governor-General Will Withdraw at Close of This Year

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—The speedy inauguration of a 10-year commonwealth government was planned Wednesday by Filipino leaders on the heels of Tuesday's plebiscite which overwhelmingly ratified the proposed constitution.

Under the new government the Filipino president succeeds the American governor-general probably before the end of the year as the first actual governmental transition toward complete independence from the United States.

While complete plebiscite returns are not available it is indicated the charter will be approved by 25 to 1.

State Income Tax Is Due Wednesday May 15th Last Date on Which to File Return Without Penalty

LITTLE ROCK—The time for filing 1934 individual income tax returns will expire Wednesday, State Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman said Tuesday.

An act passed at the 1935 session of the legislature changed the time for filing state income tax returns from May 15 to March 15, the same date federal returns are due, but Mr. Wiseman extended the time for filing this year because of the short notice of the change.

Corporations, partnerships and individuals who conduct their business on a fiscal year basis may obtain permission to delay filing returns until after the expiration of the fiscal year. At least half the tax must be paid when the return is filed, but the other half may be deferred until September 15.

"You should use your own good judgment on what you do. This matter is in your hands. You are here to make an investigation of all alleged arson cases occurring in Hempstead county within the last three years."

"I know most of you personally. I believe you will perform your duty. And I want you to go to the bottom of this."

Judge Bush said that he understood that charges of arson had been made more or less public in Hope for the last several years, but he cautioned the jury "you are up here to investigate alleged arson cases occurring within the last three years."

The judge told the grand jury it was his understanding that several alleged arson cases would expire under the statute of limitations—three years—within the next few days, and this was the reason for convening a special grand jury this particular day.

The Jury Retires After receiving instruction from the judge the grand jury retired at 10 a. m. to begin deliberations.

Homecoming Gets Good Attendance

400 Visitors Reach Washington for Program on Sunday

Washington's 13th annual Homecoming was celebrated here Sunday and well attended by scores of former residents and their families who thoroughly enjoyed the association with friends and neighbors of other days. More than 200 ex-residents signed the register and it is estimated that at least that many more, who were mainly people from other parts of Hempstead county and nearby towns, did not register.

The weather on Sunday was ideal for the occasion, and at an early hour visitors began to gather on the courthouse lawn where the Homecoming committee had provided comfortable seats and drinking water. Many visited the cemetery and placed flowers on the graves of nearly every square.

At 11 o'clock the annual Homecoming and Mother's Day service was held at the Methodist church, with the Rev. John L. Sutton, of Jackson, Miss., and a former Washington man, delivered the sermon to a large congregation. Splendid music for the occasion was furnished by Mrs. Claud Agnew.

Visitors attended the celebration from points as far north as St. Louis, with New York on the East, California on the West and Jackson, Miss., on the South. Dr. and Mrs. Grandison Royston were here from St. Louis. Mrs. Jennie Delony Meyrowitz from New York. Mrs. P. F. Willis, the former Miss Agatha Wilson, from Fresno, California. Mrs. R. A. White and son Orville White, from Palm Springs, Calif. and the Rev. Mr. Sutton from Jackson, Miss.

Other out of state visitors were Mrs. Kate Burden Laski, Fort Worth, Mrs. B. A. Hartsfield, Seminole, Okla., Mrs. (Continued on page three)

Grand Jury Ends 5-Hour Probe by Refusing Action

Adjournment at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday Ends Local Investigation

NO REAL EVIDENCE

Closes Official Action on Crosnoe "Who's Who" List

Arson indictments were refused by the special Hempstead county grand jury at Washington Wednesday.

The jurors adjourned at 2:30 p. m. after five hours of deliberation. The grand jury reported verbally to Circuit Judge Dexter Bush that it was unable to find sufficient evidence to justify an indictment. There was no written report.

Judge Charges Jury A special Hempstead county grand jury convened at 9 a. m. Wednesday at Washington to investigate Charles Crosnoe's alleged "who's who" arson list and other possible cases arising from Hope's $200,000 panic fire loss.

Despite a previous denial that he expected to attend the grand jury session, State Insurance Commissioner U. A. Gentry was present Wednesday morning with his assistant Ed Trice, and Ike Teague of the Arkansas Underwriter's association, all three of Little Rock, although Mr. Gentry's home town is Hope.

Sheriff Jim Bearden announced he was certain that at least five cases would be submitted for the grand jury probe, involving four Hope persons and a Hot Springs resident.

Arson Defined. In his charge to the grand jury Circuit Judge Dexter Bush reviewed the laws against arson, and was quoted as saying:

"Arson is the malicious burning of any property or one's own property for the purpose of collecting insurance."

"The grand jury should allow his personal feelings to enter into this investigation. The jurors must be governed by broad principles of law."

"As grand jurors you are more than a regular citizen. It is your duty to forget personal opinions and feelings, regardless of the person involved."

"It is not right or just to fail to perform your duty because of the persons in this investigation. The grand jury room is no place in which to protect a friend. All persons should stand alike before the eyes of the law."

Must Have Evidence. "On the other hand, no person should be indicted for sensational or publicity purposes. Indictments should be returned if the evidence is sufficient, but there should be no indictments unless the evidence warrants it."

"You, as the grand jury, must act now or never. Do not let the fact that this is a special grand jury influence you. Deliberate and consider these matters as if this were a regular grand jury."

"You should use your own good judgment on what you do. This matter is in your hands. You are here to make an investigation of all alleged arson cases occurring in Hempstead county within the last three years."

"I know most of you personally. I believe you will perform your duty. And I want you to go to the bottom of this."

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Acquire Regular Habit to Avoid Constipation.

Eat the proper food and acquire the habit of regularity in your hygiene, and you will suffer very little, if at all, from constipation.

If you fail to have an action of the bowels at least once in 24 to 48 hours, you are said to be constipated. There are differences of opinion as to what constitutes normal action of the bowels, but most doctors believe that once in 24 hours is the average.

There are, of course, some people who have two actions daily and others who have three daily, this being normal for them. Such activity, however, should not be taken as necessary or desirable for everyone else.

There are many causes for failure of the bowels to act regularly in the manner in which they should. In some cases the bowels fail to act simply because the muscles of the bowel are relaxed and not sufficiently stimulated. This is called atonic constipation. In most of such instances, prevention is better than cure. Prevention involves development of a good hygiene and a suitable diet.

Most important is selection of a regular time and insistence on that time without regard to any possible interference. The time usually selected is just after breakfast, since at that time the waste material from the day previous is collected in the lower part of the bowel, the stomach is empty, and the taking of food stimulates the intestinal tract to action.

Sometimes the taking of a glass of water, either cold or hot, on rising in the morning will help to stimulate such action. Moreover, a sufficient amount of water—from six to eight glasses daily—should be taken regularly to keep the waste material suitably soft and sufficient in bulk. In cases of this type, addition of artificial bulk to the diet generally is considered helpful. For this purpose there have been occasional fads for the use of various substances.

At one time bran was used above all others; then came agar-agar and more recently psyllium seeds. All these act in about the same manner, absorbing water and additional bulk and thus stimulating the bowel to action.

It is also believed that the diet may contain extra amounts of fat in cases of this type, and sometimes figs and prunes seem to be useful.

In selecting a diet for this type of constipation, you should consider particularly the use of vegetables containing large amounts of cellulose, such as turnip greens, Brussels sprouts, green beans, corn, spinach, lettuce, and cauliflower.

In diet of this type the very finely masticated foods, like strained fruits and vegetables, are not as desirable as those in which the cellulose is unbroken.

Horsemen Will Like Tales of the Hunt
—The Silver Horn—Tells of Sport's Swank Traditions

One of the season's most interesting reprints is "The Silver Horn," by Gordon Grand. This book was originally published some three years ago, in an limited edition, and has already become a classic in the field of hunting stories.

Since your reviewer is innocent of knowledge of the hunt and its traditions, he is indebted to Max Riddle, an authority on such matters, for this review. Mr. Riddle writes:

The title refers, of course, to the hunting horn, itself a symbol of gay, courageous living, and the book is a series of classic stories dealing mainly with Colonel Weatherford, a brusque but kindly sportsman of old New England. Colonel Weatherford is now an established character of literature; in the hunting field he observes the tradition of generations past.

One tale deals with the trust estate which he established for his old racing and breeding partner, Major Dunlany Denning of Kentucky. It is an absolutely perfect story of its type, combining a fine picture of old-time Kentucky with a fine literary style. Published by Windward House, the book sells for $3.75.

Another book for sportsmen is "The Belvedere Hounds," by D. T. Carlisle. This is a collection of sketches which have been appearing in the sports magazine "Sportsman" since 1927, and the sketches, displaying the antics of hounds, reflect a subtle understanding of human beings as well—and provide a good many hearty laughs.

Published by the Derrydale Press, the book sells for $5.

YOUR CHILDREN

Motorists, Too, Blame Drivers for Fatal Auto Accidents

Whether or not you have a car, whether you walk or exercise your feet on clutch and brake, you hate drivers with a passion that would set fire to a soaked sponge.

After the Rockville accident I ventured an opinion about engine lights—that they were too high up in the air for many drivers to see. The mail brought a chorus of dissensions. Did I not know that careless drivers were to blame for all accidents?

During the winter I related an incident I beheld, concerning a young sledder who was weaving in and out of traffic (at night) on a glassy street where no car could be sure of its footing six feet ahead. The inevitable smash and a broken skull resulted. I cautioned parents at this time against allowing children to this court death.

The mail assured me then, as later, that drivers were culpable in all and every event.

Now that the vote is in, I may as well make it unanimous. In the past month I have had occasion to make cross-country runs aggregating some two thousand miles. I am quite ready to join the rest of the jury about drivers in general. I believe that about one-half of those behind the wheel (I use bigger and better fractions each year) are ignorant of road etiquette altogether. They may know all about gears and brakes, but what they don't know is that there are other people in the world with rights and privileges.

From the practical joker who straddles the line and keeps 20 cars trailing him for miles, to the moron who cuts sharply in front, suddenly to stop at a popstand while you try to keep right side up in the ditch, all such and in-between are open to indictment by decent and polite citizens.

It is getting worse instead of better. If certain pilots attempted the same ruthless behavior on the sidewalk that they get away with on the road or street, in five minutes they would be hospital cases. No one would stand it for a second.

We'll have to keep our children off the middle of the street, of course, and use every precaution we can to keep alive ourselves. The responsibility is two-sided. But the time will come and soon I rather imagine when the road-bounder and high-way-cut will behave or have his license revoked. All selfish or defiant or willfully careless drivers are potential killers.

Summer Sweethearts

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATHARINE STRYKER, beautiful, 20, is discontented with the useless round of social activities that make up her life. Her father and aristocratic stepmother, BERTINE, refuse to let Katharine undertake any sort of work. Katharine rides daily with MICHAEL HEATHEROE, young westerner who runs a riding club. SALLY MOON, local coquette, also enrolls at the club for riding lessons.

ZOE PARKER, Katharine's friend, returns from Europe where she was sent to forget a love affair with GIBBS LARKIN, of whom her parents disapprove. Zoe is still in love with Gibbs. DR. JOHN KAYE, a relative of Bertine's, owns the Stryker horse farm.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

ZOE, after all, was not angry. Katharine's heart softened when she saw her at the Country Club dance—small and round and wistful in her floating printed silk, which was the prize of the trucks she had brought back from Paris.

It was a gala night at the club. Ribbons of colored paper flew back and forth, and balloons were set free, only to be punctured by the cigar of some roisterer. Katharine danced with Dr. Kaye, to be cut in upon again and again. She looked lovely tonight in clear ivory silk, the gown molded to the lines of her exquisite young figure. Her time Stryker, glancing at Katharine's animated face, as she laughed and talked with John Kaye, observed to her husband with satisfaction that Katharine had evidently forgotten all about that career nonsense.

Frank Corliss, the typical sophomore, in elegant English dinner clothes, with real pearls for studs, made a foil for Zoe Parker. Lisa Parker and Bertine both agreed that they were a charming pair. "He seems quite mad about her," Lisa sighed. "I wouldn't mind seeing her settle down—after this last year."

"You've had a worrying time of it," agreed Bertine, who knew all about Gibbs and who, although not a mother herself, would tell any one who cared to listen that the girl of today was certainly a problem.

"The only thing Katharine really seems to care about," Bertine said brightly, "is riding. Really, I wish sometimes that Victor had let her have a horse of her own. I am not quite sure I like the idea of exposing her to the charms of that young westerner over at Shady Ridge. Much too good-looking, in a certain way."

"Oh, Katharine's all right," Lisa Parker said comfortably, watching Zoe's brown curls bob against young Corliss' black-coated shoulder. "She is so serene. Nothing ever seems to trouble her."

Bertine started to reply, but thought better of it. People misunderstood so, if she said a single word about Katharine! That was what it was to be a stepmother. Nobody gave you the least bit of credit.

Katharine steered John out on the terrace. "Not!" she observed, drooping against a pillar. "And hot!"

"John, you see what I mean about father and Bertine? I haven't had a chance to talk to you all day."

He nodded. "I see. They want to keep you wrapped in cotton wool. Your father doesn't know you've grown up."

Her eyes glittered feverishly in the half light.

"How—how can I escape from it?"

HE laughed, and something of the wholesome quality of his own good, gentle personality touched her with a sort of healing releasing her from the mutinous tensions which had bound her all day.

"Well, the Victorians used to marry to get out from under parental supervision. But that didn't work so well. Maybe it does now. Women seem to rule the roost."

"Don't be vulgar." But she was laughing, too.

"However," she pursued, with relish. "You don't just marry—like that, I mean. You've got to be—well, at least, think you're in love."

"Plenty of boys have been loping around after you tonight," said Dr. Kaye quietly. In the light from the flare of his match, cupped against the breeze, she could see his lean, almost ascetic face.

Thirty, John was; he was already a fine doctor and a man everyone respected. The woman who married him would be a lucky person, Katharine thought, innocently.

"Oh, boys!" she rejoined, on a note of contempt.

"Don't like 'em, eh?"

"Not—not much!" she confessed. There was a wicker couch here, with deep square cushions. She sank into it and John Kaye sat down beside her.

"There somebody else?"

"Not—not really," she sighed. John would be a perfect person to confide in. She needed a confidante; it was hard, always keeping things to yourself. And there was no one she could talk to, really. Bertine didn't understand. . . . oh, she meant to, but she never really heard what you said; or if she did you were certain she would use it as a lunch table topic next day.

No, she wouldn't confide in Bertine.

Besides, there was really nothing to tell about Michael Heatheroe. Katharine had had, on arriving at the club tonight, the strangest feeling that she might see him among the guests. Obviously that was absurd.

"Nobody else," she said, quite firmly. Zoe came out with her Princeton 07, and Captain Byrne and his handsome blond fiancée joined them for a cigar. Captain Althaus Byrne was an army man, home from Fort Sill on vacation. He and the plump, graceful widow from Inglewood Hills were to be married the following spring. Gracie McTavine was 35, just four years younger than the erect bronzed soldier who was to be her third husband. Gracie had been twice "lawfully widowed." Zoe said gleefully. She did not like Gracie, who insisted on being the center of every group she joined. Gracie had a penetrating voice; she told endless stories of dramatic incidents of which she was the center. There was always an amused male or two to listen. She held them by sheer force of personality.

KATHARINE said to herself that she did not mind Gracie, and yet tonight when the gushing Mrs. McTavine took possession of Dr. Kaye she was conscious of a distinct sense of annoyance. John seemed to like it. Of course he had met her half a dozen times before, but that was before he had gone abroad to study. His two years in the European capitals had robbed him of much of his former diffidence. He had an easy manner, an air of authority which Gracie was quick to recognize.

"... now tell me all about this marvelous facial surgery," Katharine heard her coo. John's gentle, deliberate voice answered. "Dance?" Captain Byrne was at her elbow.

"Love to."

Well, if John Kaye "fell for" Gracie McTavine as easily as that, Katharine told herself later that night, she was afraid she wouldn't have much respect for him. Gracie had kept him at her side with quiet insistence all the remainder of the evening.

"Men are all fools," said Katharine to herself, as she undressed. Even Johnny, whom she had thought above such things. She fell asleep congratulating herself that she had not confided any of her innermost feelings to him.

Moonlight streamed over the floor and lay in barred squares on the broad mahogany four-poster where she slept, uneasily turning in her dreams. A red-haired rider on a roan horse galloped through her dream; and there was a lean, ascetic-looking man in evening clothes somewhere in it, too. Kaye argued with him, she was angry, she wept. She woke to an uneasy feeling.

But over the breakfast table Johnny Kaye was his usual pleasant self. He sprang to pull out Katharine's chair for her. His dark blue suit, his striped shirt, his scrubbed-looking surgeon's hands were good solid facts in the foggy morning.

"Sleep well?"

"Not so very." As she unfolded her napkin he observed that the shadows under her eyes were deeper. "The foghorn blew all night long," Katharine contributed, sugaring her grapefruit. "You're going into town?"

"On the 5:53, yes." He buttered a roll with precision. "Bertine said to tell you she'd be back before lunch. She had to go to some Garden Club meeting. And your father's off for early golf."

SHE lifted heavy eyes. Nothing seemed to matter very much this morning. She had missed her hour for riding. But did she want to ride any more? Wasn't Michael Heatheroe becoming a far too important factor in her life? Wouldn't it, perhaps, be wise to make a clean cut of the matter? Oh, but it was her one great outlet; she needed it. It kept her going. . . .

"... thought perhaps you might come in and lunch with me," John Kaye was saying.

"Oh, I'm so sorry. I'm afraid I didn't hear what you said before," she said in contrition.

"I'm moving in Monday. Found a place," Dr. Kaye said. "It's furnished, so Bertine won't have any fun." His eyes twinkled behind the rimless glasses. "But I thought I'd like to see you again before I settle down to work in earnest. There won't be any more week-ends for me when I get under way."

"I'd love to come for lunch," Katharine said. "Could I see the apartment, perhaps? That would be fun."

It was arranged that she was to meet him at the Ritz at 1. Later they would go over to the building on the East River where Dr. Kaye was to live. In two rooms high above the turgid stream with its tugs and doughty steamers plying their way to New England. After John had left Katharine called the number of the riding club.

"That you, Tips? It's Miss Stryker. Tell Michael I won't be riding today. I didn't want him to keep busy for me. . . ."

"That's all right, Miss Stryker. Tell Michael he went off with Miss Moon on Fury 10:15 minutes ago."

Katharine put the telephone in its cradle with hands that shook a little. She vaguely recognized the little face that stared back at her from the mirror. Sally Moon—on her own little horse. Sally there at her home!

Ellen went by, with a drift of dresses over her arm. "I pressed your pink shantung, Miss Katharine."

"Thank." But she didn't really

Regular Beauty Care Erases Mark of Time.

The fresh, smooth, young-looking skins of the majority of mature screen and stage stars should prove to the average girl that it is quite possible to stay youthful and attractive through the years.

Some may argue, of course, that these artists have more time to devote to beauty routines. Just the same, there isn't anyone who can't set aside four hours a week in the name of beauty. And four hours will do wonders.

Assuming you have no special desire. She wasn't thinking of the truck she would wear to town to lunch with John Kaye. Her mind burned with the vision of two riders drifting along the green lanes together.

Was this jealousy? Was she really in love with Michael Heatheroe?

Sounds

There is so much of sound escapes the ear!
The fragile yellow sound that comes malingeringly from the throat.
Lifting in measured rhythm each shining spear;
The small unwilling sounds that tremble and break;
Violets, folded in slumber beneath the snow,
Waking with purple whispers from their bed,
Announcing, clarion like, the final thaw—
Yet who has heard a word the violets said?
The long, slow golden kiss of the sun upon
The breast of twilight; kinks of pale stars sing,
Climbing the slopes of darkness one by one;
The moon's bright call to lovers, taking wing,
O gracious God, giving to mortal ear
Only the sounds the listening heart can hear.—Selected.

Tuesday night guests, Mr. Green's mother, Mrs. C. C. Green of Emerson, Ark., and brother, Harold Green of Lake Charles, La.

The Althean, Fidelis and Gleaners, young women classes of the First Baptist Sunday school, with Mrs. A. D. Brannan, Mrs. Hugh Smith and Mrs. Hugh Jones as teachers, entertained on Tuesday evening at a special Mother's day program, for their mothers and number of invited guests. Preceding the program an informal reception was held in the ladies parlors, the guests being greeted by the teachers and class presidents and presented with a dainty corsage of pink roses. The room was beautifully decorated with Dorothy Perkins roses, gracefully arranged in floor baskets, bowls and vases. Promptly at 8 o'clock the audience was invited into the church auditorium, where one of the cleverest and most interesting programs had been prepared. Mrs. Hugh Smith announced the program which opened with the Song of Welcome, followed by the welcome address by Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mrs. Gus Haynes, in behalf of the mothers and guests responded to the welcome address. The next feature was a piano selection by J. T. Luck Jr., after which the Gleaners class presented a very clever sketch including a bank of various musical instruments directed by Professor Rubenstein from Germany, who both praised and apologized for the triumphs and failures of the selected group, who were in costumes dating from "Gefor De War" to the most stylish lady from "Bug-seuffe." With Mrs. J. C. Carlton accompanying, Miss Frances Snyder sang "Pat of My Cradle Days" after which the Fidelis class presented a very amusing sketch entitled "On the Firing Line" which was written by their teacher, Mrs. Hugh Smith and represented the president of any missionary society, rounding up her helpers over the telephone for a coming meeting of the society. The next sketch was "A Lesson in Geography" presented by members of the Althean class, which was received with much applause and merriment. The program closed with a beautiful retrospective entitled, "The Old Spinning Wheel" in the proper setting of candle lighting and period costumes, with Mrs. Hugh Smith turning the spinning wheel and calling to mind the events of a life time, which were demonstrated very beautifully by different members of the class closing with the song "The Old Spinning Wheel," with harmonica accompaniment, was sung by Miss Frances Snyder. Following the program the audience was invited back into the ladies parlors where a most delightful refreshment was served with cake. A prize was given to the oldest mother present, and went to Mrs. Mollie Lane, Mrs. Alton Honeycutt received lovely flowers for the youngest mother, and a gift went to Mrs. A. S. Hunt for being the mother of fourteen children. A special prize, a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas went to Mrs. G. H. Martindale, who is the mother of triplets.

Claudette Colbert Here on Thursday

"Private Worlds" Includes Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson

Claudette Colbert, winner of the Award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best feminine performance in films in 1934, comes to the Saenger Thursday and Friday in her latest starring picture, "Private Worlds."

Miss Colbert is supported by a cast headed by Charles Boyer, noted French star; Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson and Joel McCrea.

"Private Worlds" is adapted from the best-selling novel of the same title by Phyllis Bottome. Miss Colbert is cast as a brilliant young psychiatrist, skilled in probing the loves and hates that lie in the "private worlds" of other people's minds, but as naive in understanding her own secret thoughts as any child. The romantic interest is provided in her relationship with Boyer, and in the conflicting relationships between McCrea, Miss Bennett and Miss Vinson.

In her new role, Miss Colbert combines the characterizations she established in "It Happened One Night" and "The Gilded Lily" with the more serious heroines of some of her previous pictures. The result, critics agree, marks a new triumph in her brilliant career.

Pontiac Plants to Be Much Enlarged

General Motors to Spend 3 1/2 Millions on Pontiac (Mich.) Factory

PONTIAC, Mich.—General Motors will spend $3,500,000 in the next few months upon expansion of production facilities for Pontiac automobiles at Pontiac, Mich.

Expansion of the Fisher Body corporation plant which supplies bodies for the Pontiac car will cost $2,500,000. In addition $1,000,000 will be spent in enlarging the Pontiac Motor Division plant.

The enlargement will include new buildings, machinery and equipment. Construction work has been started.

The rapid increase in the demand for Pontiac cars has exceeded the expectations for this year. This is bound to result in further demands being made upon the plant during the next year. We are moving to meet this expected increase in business.

You remember how in Egypt, back in the days of the Pharaohs, they stored up grain during the seven good years so as to be ready for the seven lean years to come...

Lean years may come... and fat years may go...

That's why we have close to a hundred million dollars worth of tobacco packed away in 4 1/2 miles of warehouses to grow mild and naturally sweet.

To make sure that Chesterfields will be uniform in taste and mildness, we have in storage mild, ripe tobaccos from the crops of four years—1931-'32-'33 and '34.

Mild Ripe Tobacco... Aged 2 years or more...

—every man who knows about leaf tobacco—will tell you that it takes mild, ripe tobacco to make a good cigarette; and this is the kind we buy for CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

All of the tobaccos used in CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes are properly aged to make them milder and sweeter.

A Big Job of Muzzling

Currently, Mr. Roosevelt seeks to route all publicity on the huge work-relief program through Frank Walker at the National Emergency Council. This means an effort to muzzle about 66 federal agencies charged with carrying out the program.

The object is laudable. There will be no such bickering and bureaucratic jealousy as the money is dished.

out that a bad effect will be created if something isn't done to partially stifle its articulation.

F. D. wants no repetitions of the public row between Secretary Ickes and Housing Administrator Moffett over housing—and he faces the prospect of a whole crop of such outbursts. (Incidentally, the break between Ickes and Hopkins has been steadily widening as it appeared that the Ickes position in the program would be a distinctly subordinate one.)

The public doesn't react well in these cases—as the White House learned recently, after two cabinet members had made speeches expressing sharply opposing views in a certain western city—and the Republicans take advantage of them.

There'll Be Leaks
But unless the Secret Service is enormously augmented or a lot of newspapermen are tossed into concentration camps, there will be no lack of unauthorized news as to the work-relief program.

Hopkins and Ickes have become close-mouthed at their once popular press conferences, referring questions to Walker. But Walker, though able and well-liked, is commonly regarded as half-brother to the clamp-jawed clam.

And newspapermen are no more willing to give up their news sources in those 60 agencies than most officials are willing to give up the privilege of saying "don't quote me on this, but—"

There will be no end of heebie-jeebies, private investigations, and angry explosions as news leaks out.

Richberg Tears Hair
Donald Richberg has been known to dictate three pages of single-spaced anger to a correspondent on the basis of a mere paragraph or two which told of a relatively inconsequential report made to him—which hadn't been formally released for publication.

And there was plenty of fuss as to how the leak had occurred, though persons in half a dozen agencies knew all about it.

"You've shaken the pillars of this building!" exclaimed an NRA official to a newspaperman who had written about the internal troubles of the National Industry Recovery Board, which then revolved around Chairman Glavin.

It seemed NRA wheels hadn't revolved for two or three days (that was at a time when NRA wheels still revolved) while the board jittered over the story and a testimonial was prepared in which all board members were expected to declare their faith in Williams.

The testimonial idea was dropped as one or two members came to realize that it was rather silly.

AAA Has Its Grief

The Interior Department stood on its ear for days after the news leaked that White House pressure had been directed against two favorite Ickes subordinates, Ebert K. Burell and Louis Glavis.

Great efforts were made to find the tipster and several innocent persons were accused.

There have been periodic commotions in the AAA, too, as stories appeared which indicated large concessions by the Chester Davis administration to the food industries. Censorship efforts at AAA persist.

All of which may suggest to you the falsity of stories that the huge corps of New Deal press agents manage successfully to suppress the news. It merely tries.

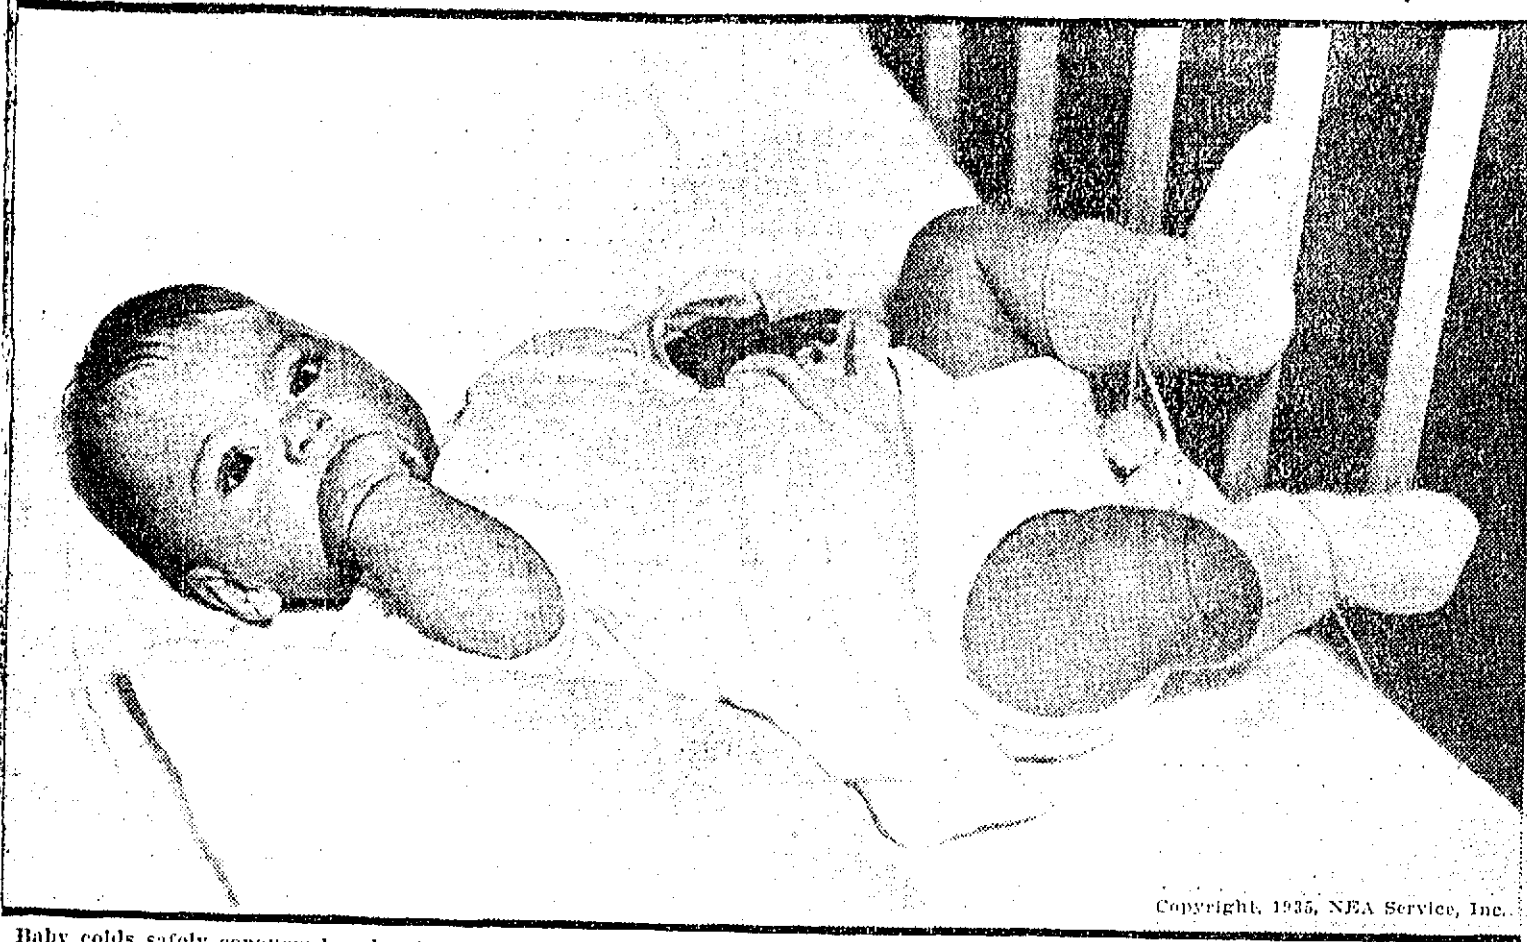

Logic

The dusky highwayman stepped out in front of the elderly colored brother. "Too up you han's, boy," he ordered. "Ah can't; Ah got's rhuematics," replied the other.

"You kin—Ah got's automatics," said the highwayman sternly. "You win, Mistah, you win," he said as his hands went up; "looks lak you 'atics is de stronges!"

Quins, Year Old on May 28, Rest Up for Their Birthday Party

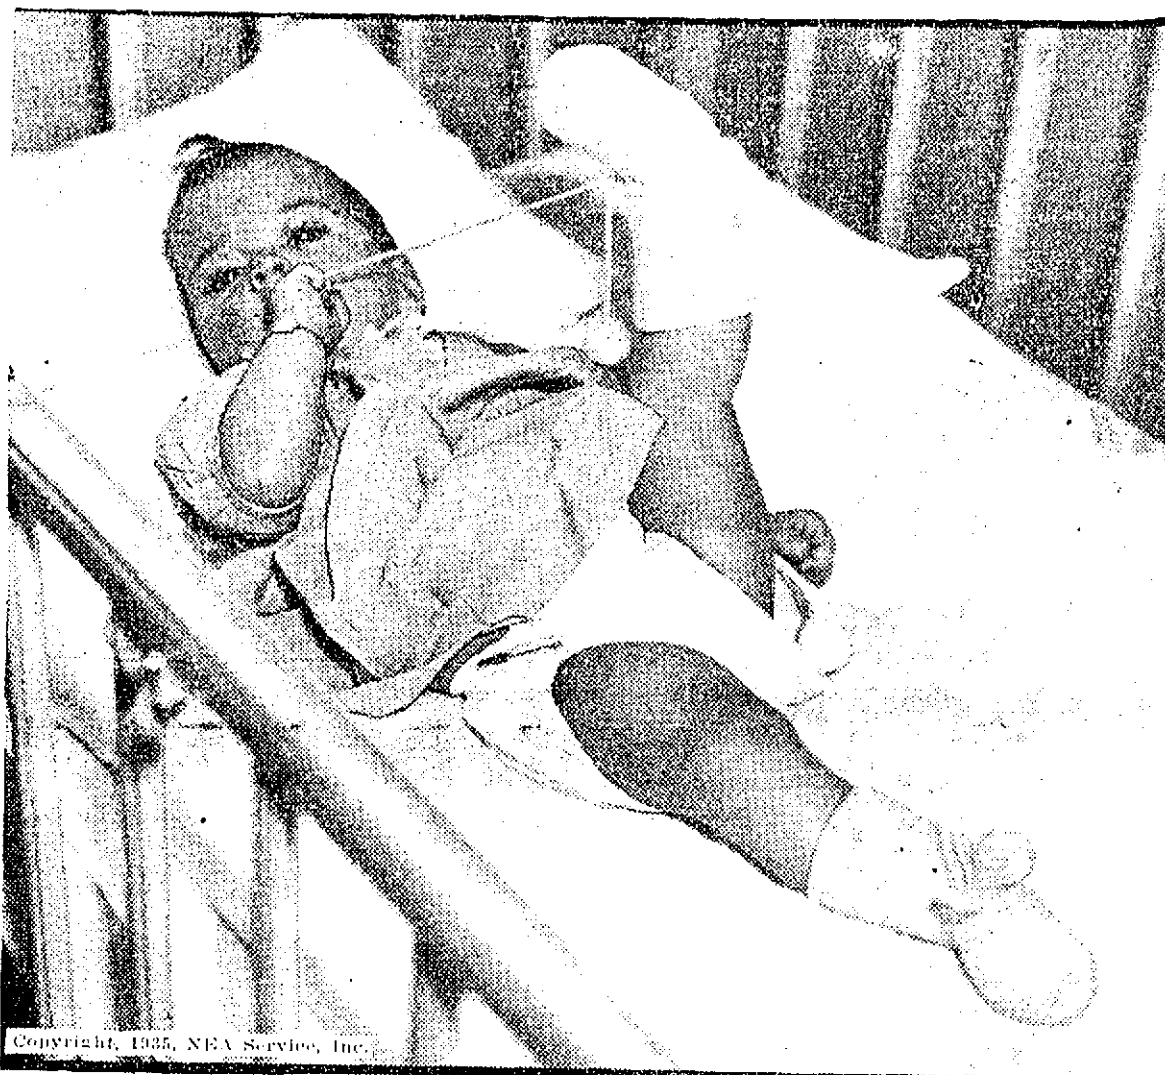

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

Baby colds safely conquered and out of the way, the Dionne quintuplets take their ease, resting for the festivities which will soon mark their first birthday. Here's Annette, ambitiously trying to cram her fat fist into her mouth, and succeeding only partially.

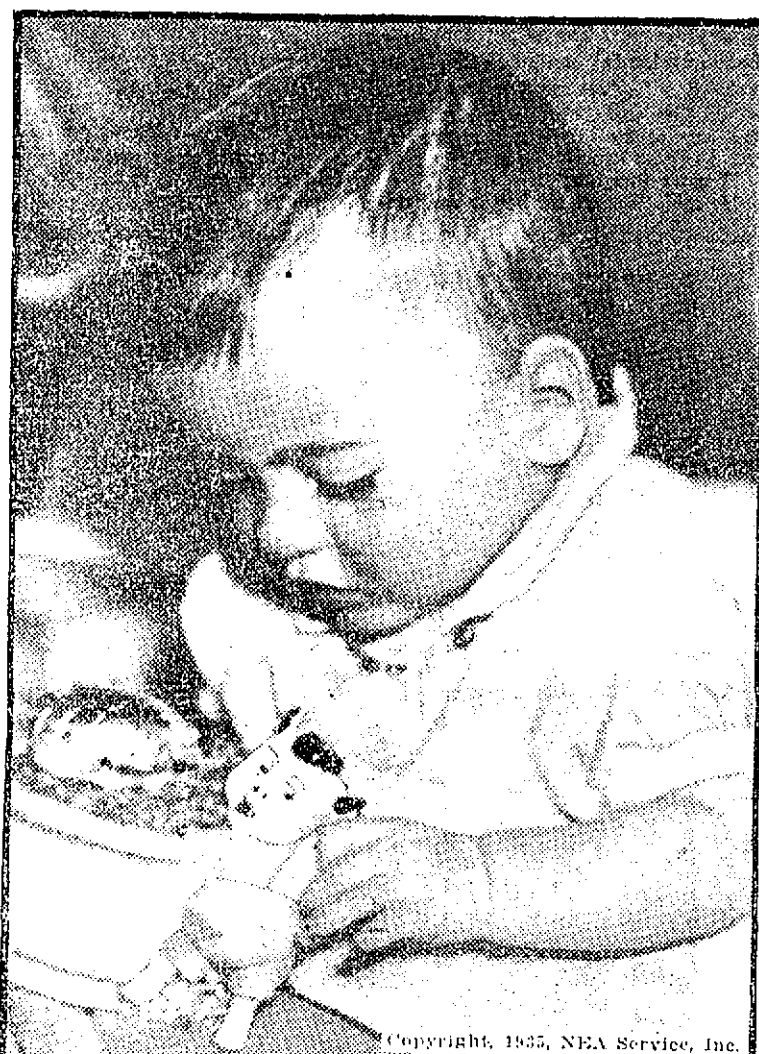

Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

But regular-eyed Yvonne, her hair tousled, thinks it's lots more fun just to lie in the crib and kick lustily through the white bars. What sort of mischief is plotting behind those big eyes and the mouth that's clearly just about to break into a merry smile?

Cecile's found a new plaything, and if you never knew before why booties have long strings, you know now. They're to help little girls practice limbering-up exercises, and Cecile seems pretty proud of her discovery.

Lucie, quieter than her sisters, is satisfied to play with a toy pig, making a perfect picture of intense concentration amid the more athletic activities of her sisters.

Marie, tiniest of the "quins," scorns any such aids as bootie-strings, and grasps her right foot firmly just to show how agile she is. The harmless tumor which made special radium treatments necessary for Marie at first is visible on her right leg.

Now here's a new adventure in quinnland! Annette's learning to drink her orange juice from a glass, just like any real grown-up. She seems a little puzzled by the experiment, as she sits straight in her little chair and surveys the glass tendered by Nurse De Kirline.

The Dionne quintuplets get their heads together on plans for the coming summer. Cecile, foreground center, stretches out her toes and regards her booted feet meditatively. "They'll be carrying me around soon," she reflects. And then, around the clock from Cecile are Marie, Emelie, Annette and Yvonne, kicking and stretching their developing muscles in a perfect picture of health, happiness and general toleration for a world of soft blankets, warmth, food, and perpetual wonderment.

Idabel Boy Wins National Contest

Gordon B. McLendon on "What I Would Do If I Were President"

NEW YORK.—Gordon B. McLendon, 14, of Idabel, Oklahoma, and Margy Lazarus, 12, of 151-81st Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., were the winners of the first Young America (the new national news weekly for youth) Contest for writing the best essays on "What I would do if I were President." They are being rewarded with a week's trip to Washington.

"If I were president," writes Gordon B. McLendon in his prize-winning essay, "I would encourage Congress to conclude its labors and return home. Business hardly knows what to expect while the legislative mills are grinding.

"I would not worry about balancing the national budget. This is impossible in the face of such heavy federal expenditures. This can be taken care of when the recovery program is more advanced.

"I would secure the bonus bill enactment with a provision for one billion dollars for its financing to be paid by issuance of silver certificates, thus causing slight but controlled inflation. This would add impetus to national recovery.

"I would encourage foreign trade with the United States through permanent representatives stationed abroad.

"Stamp out the 'dole' as it is un-American.

"Stay out of the World Court. League of Nations and avoid foreign entanglements.

"Stop squandering public moneys on dredging unnavigable river and useless attempts to grow forests on barren plains.

"Stop making federal laws that encroach upon state rights.

"Would not require taxes on incomes of less than five thousand dollars but would increase taxes on incomes and inheritances in the higher brackets.

"Grant loans to infant aircraft manufacturers and transport companies, slightly increase our standing army and encouragement of national guard training.

"Maintain navy comparable to the navies of other great powers.

"With these things accomplished, the United States would gain the admiration of the civilized world and result in a happy prosperous and contented people."

Chain Letter Is State Violation

C. & M. Digest Sections 2667-8 Quoted by L. R. Prosecutor

LITTLE ROCK.—Operators of chain letter factories will be given the opportunity of explaining their get-rich-quick system to Municipal Judge Harb, if Sheriff Branch and Chief of Police Bennett act on the recommendations of Prosecuting Attorney Fred A. Donham.

Mr. Donham sent letters to the two officials late Tuesday, advising them that chain letters constitute a violation of state statutes prohibiting lotteries and advising them that it is their duty to make arrests.

Informed of the prosecutor's action, Otto Ozment, operator of a chain letter service in the Wallace building, said he did not believe that chain letters constitute a lottery and indicated he would be glad to test the matter in the courts.

"They can't arrest me and close up my business, because I am not violating the law," he said.

Mr. Donham said he is confident that Ozment and other operators can be prosecuted successfully. He pointed out that they are subject to prosecution under two sections of the Arkansas code, each of which provides for fines ranging from $50 to $500.

Mr. Donham furnished Sheriff Branch and Chief Bennett with a good lead for an immediate investigation, saying information had reached him that "there is a place in the Wallace building and possibly one in the Donaghy building where they keep for sale a chain letter wherein money may be received or lost."

"Such places are in violation of Section 2667, Crawford & Moses Digest, which reads as follows: 'Any person who shall hereafter keep an office, room or place for sale or disposition of lottery tickets, give concert tickets or like devices, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to indictment, and on conviction for such offense shall be fined in a sum not less than $50, nor more than $500, with costs of prosecution,' Mr. Donham wrote.

"Section 2668 of Crawford & Moses Digest provides that: 'Any person who shall vend, sell, or otherwise dispose of any lottery ticket, give concert ticket, or like device, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to indictment, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not less than $50 nor more than $500.' 'The letters as above described are in direct conflict with the above statutes and you are hereby advised that it is your duty to arrest such persons violating this law.'

Tammany Leader
in Policy Racket

James P. Hines Involved in New York Politico-Gambler Scandal

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The name of James P. Hines, powerful Tammany district leader, was injected into a grand jury investigation of alleged alliances between policy gamblers and politicians Tuesday when a newspaper reporter was sentenced to jail for refusing to answer questions.

The reporter, Martin Mooney of the New York American, mentioned Hines as the man he said he had heard a group of policy operators call in reference to some trouble but refused to answer other questions on ethical grounds.

Brought before General Sessions Judge Morris Koenig, Mooney explained it was the "first recognized law of a newspaper man not to violate a confidence."

Judge Koenig held him guilty of contempt and sentenced him to 30 days in the workhouse and fined him $250. Execution of the sentence was deferred until Thursday.

The reporter was called before the grand jury several times during the last two weeks and questioned about sources of his information for a series of articles on policy gambling.

Mooney told Judge Koenig that while he was writing the articles, last March, he had lived with a group of gamblers and policy operators.

As read at his hearing on the contempt charge, one of the questions he had refused to answer at first concerned the identity of a man called "Jimmy." Later he told the grand jury he referred to "Jimmy Hines."

Asked if he knew who Dutch Schultz's agents were, he replied "yes."

"Who are they?" he was asked. "I refuse to answer," he replied.

"Did you ever see Hines with any of those gamblers that you lived with?"

"No," he answered. Explaining his refusal to answer other questions, Mooney told Judge Koenig:

"I cannot answer the questions put to me by the Grand Jury because I would violate a confidence. If the day should come when it is imperative for me to earn my bread and butter by double-crossing people, I will deem it advisable to tear up my press card."

Ford Shows New All-Weather Sedan

A NEW all-weather Ford V-8 convertible sedan, a dual purpose car, available for use either as an open phaeton or a snug enclosed sedan, is announced by the Ford Motor Company. Top photo shows the new body type with top in place; below, the top down, windows lowered, and center door pillars removed.

The top, of tan-colored cloth, can be lowered and folded snugly, covered by a boot, back of the rear seat. The two center pillars are removable and may be stowed away in the car. Converted in this fashion into a phaeton-type body, the car may be driven with the four door windows lowered out of sight, or raised into position as a protection against excessive wind. The window glasses are enclosed in chrome plated frames.

The body is equipped with de luxe appointments, including robe rail and ash tray in the rear compartment. Seat cushions and backs are finished in genuine leather or bedford cord, according to the pur-chaser's choice. The interior finish is in taupe throughout. The cars are available in all standard colors including gun metal, the new color introduced this year.

The luggage compartment back of the rear seat is even more spacious than in the sedans, providing plenty of room for stowing baggage while traveling.

Sanders Opens Up Louisiana Revolt

Asserts Kingfish Puts Self Ahead of Needs of the Hungry

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—After declaring he has violated and would continue to violate Senator Huey P. Long's marital law in the Louisiana capital by criticizing the senator's state official followers, Congressman J. Y. Sanders, Jr., bitterly assailed the "Long machine" in an address to his constituents Tuesday night.

Calling the electorate of Louisiana and the Sixth Congressional District to a ballot box revolt against Long's political rule, the congressman, a leader of Long's state opposition, said the January, 1935, state primary fight would see the line sharply drawn between Long and President Roosevelt.

Praising Roosevelt as "the greatest champion of the common, every-day man that the White House has had since the days of Andrew Jackson and possibly the greatest this country has ever had," Sanders excoriated Long for the Louisiana dictator's legislation to place state control over federal fund allotments.

"He (Long) says in effect to President Roosevelt 'you can not feed the hungry in Louisiana unless I handle the money,'" Sanders asserted, "and with a cynical assurance that borders upon the frenzy of despair, he serves notice upon the United States government that it can function in Louisiana only if it changes its laws to comply with his requirements."

"Our towns and communities need public works," Sanders exclaimed. "Long, through his legislature, passes laws to prevent them from getting their share of work relief. What does it mean to this political boss that communities should fail to get the improvements they desire and need? That our unemployed should go hungry?"

Farmers Applaud

for business, for bankers and for the city dwellers that the nation's farmers are becoming articulate and that they know whereof they speak."

In concluding with a reference to complicated government machinery, Mr. Roosevelt added these words to his text:

"We haven't quite got the engine tuned up yet, but it is a mighty good engine. After we have run it a total of 1,000 miles, it will be the best engine ever."

At the morning meeting in Constitution hall, Wallace obviously pleased with the acclaim given farm adjustment program, but apparently embarrassed by that acclaim himself, told the farmers they had organized the most inspiring meeting he had ever attended. He charged them especially to retain the controverted processing tax as long as industry retains the tariff.

Earlier speakers took issue with those who had questioned the origin of what was described as the "first national assembly of American farmers." The speakers contended the movement was originated by farmers and for the farmers, to demonstrate appreciation to the administration for the farm program.

Harlow Never Got Co-Ed Phone Call

Blonde Movie Star Gives Her Version of Fayetteville Feud

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—Jean Harlow said Tuesday she had not received a long distance telephone call from the Arkansas University chapter of Pi Beta Phi, national sorority, at Fayetteville, Ark.

"I read in the newspapers Tuesday that the sorority women said they would boycott my pictures because I refused to talk to them," Jean said. "I think that is unfair, because the call wasn't placed to my home, but went to the studio."

"The studio telephone exchange has since advised me that last Saturday night a man identifying himself as 'my manager and a blood relative,' called for me, and was told that I did not have a manager in Arkansas."

"The call didn't reach me, I am sorry. If the sorority women wish to call me and will telegraph the studio to arrange the time for the conversation, I shall be very happy to talk to them."

The studio explained that all calls to its stars go through the studio switchboard to discourage "cranks and pranksters" who place long distance calls to stars at all hours of day and night.

Seeking Oil Block Near Washington

Prairie Mound Oil Co. May Put Down Test North of County Seat

After 10 years of inactivity the section north of Washington is again being blocked with the intention of giving it a thorough test for gas and oil.

The blocking is being done by the Prairie Mound Oil Company, a private organization, which has already made all necessary arrangements for carrying the well to completion when and if the necessary block can be assembled and all land titles approved.

Dan W. Johnson of Clarksville, former legislator, who helped to develop the gas fields of Johnson county, is in charge of the blocking here. It is estimated that the block will contain from 1,000 to 8,000 acres and will include much the same lands that were blocked and partly tested in this locality about 10 years ago.

Just when drilling operations will begin here depends entirely on the time it will take to get this block completely assembled. This depends, to a large extent, on the land owners, the majority of whom have already leased their holdings to the oil company.

Mr. Johnson states there will be no selling of leases to finance the well, but that full arrangements have been made to carry a hole through every possible sand in which there is the slightest chance of oil being found in this section of the country.

The test well is to be drilled with a rotary rig, he says. It will be banded so as to test every depth, and is intended, when completed, to determine once and for all whether there is, or is not, any oil in the Washington section.

Stream-lined

He was a half-grown colored boy in the deep Sabine River pine tree country of East Texas. He was coming home from hunting, a single-barrel shotgun over his shoulder, two cur-dogs at his heels, and a broad smile of self-satisfaction on his face. For he carried in his good right hand a big armadillo he had shot.

A white man, passing, saw the armadillo and stopped to inquire:
"Boy, what are you going to do with that?"
"Cap'n," said the happy colored one, "we're fixin' to eat it for 'Thanksgivin' dinner'."
"You're going to eat an armadillo?" asked the white man, incredulously.
"Cap'n," said the dusky, distrust in his voice, "disheal nint no armadilla—disheal is a spote model possum."

FORD

Strikes a new note in INTERIOR DESIGN-

● THE MODERN MOTIF—Red and black accentuate the instruments, making them easier to see. Control knobs and cigarette lighter are ivory colored plastic. Center striping is chromium. Convenient glove compartment. Everything is designed to be thoroughly useful, first, and functional beauty inevitably follows.

EXPERTS in color design are enthusiastic about the new Ford Deluxe interiors. They have "spotted" immediately a new note in interior design—the subtle use of taupe grey as a background for feminine costumes.

Window mouldings, door handles, the instrument panel and even the beautiful, slim steering wheel, are all finished in blended greys. This color scheme cannot possibly clash with even the most brilliant ensemble. On the contrary, it will accentuate it.

And the upholstery!... Here beauty is coupled with long-wearing quality characteristic of custom built cars. In all Ford Deluxe closed cars you have your choice of two materials at no extra cost. Mohair or soft, pin-stripe Broadcloth in Sedans and Coupes, Bedford Cord or one hundred percent Wool Suede in Touring Sedans. See the stylish, new Ford interiors at your nearest Ford Dealer's today.
